CHINOOK Red CROSS ALUMINUM DRIVE OCT. 13 to OCT. 27

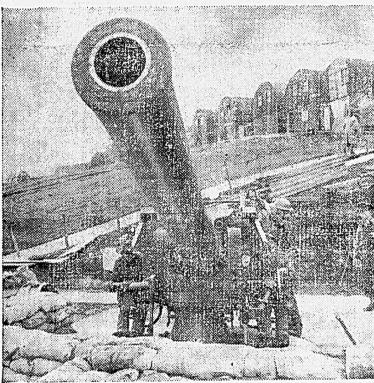

The Chinook Red Cross Branch Aluminum Drive will get under way from Oct. 13th to Oct. 27th. All residents of this district are asked to get behind this drive and to put it over the top. Clean out the pantries, the workshops, check over the scrap heaps for spare aluminum and parts.

Two tons of aluminum will make a modern fighting machine and even if this goal is impossible of achievement locally let us at least unearth every piece of aluminum which can be spared.

Let Our MOTTO be

May each and all ALUMINUM take
To wreck devastation in Hitler's wake.

Unearth your aluminum and watch for further announcements.

Canada At War

It is hardly necessary to discuss Canada's war effort for our Canadian audience, says the monthly letter of the Royal Bank of Canada for October, and continues: The information in this article is intended mainly for our readers in the United States, where many features of our war effort have, through ignorance or meidancy, been misrepresented. Since most of these views have originated with people who could have not the slightest difficulty in obtaining correct and reliable information, and who, in the main are prominent in isolationists if not pro-German activities, it seems advisable that even at the risk of being accused of violating our rule not to discuss matters with a controversial political tinge, the prevalent misrepresentation should be answered.

Official statements, and all figures quoted in this article have been drawn from official sources, show that more than 400,000 Canadian sailors, soldiers and airmen are now enrolled; of this total 100,000 soldiers and airmen are overseas. On the basis of comparative populations, this is the equivalent of the enlistment of 5,500,000 men by the United States and the despatch of 1,100,000 for service abroad.

Canada's Navy two years ago comprised 1,700 of all ranks and fifteen vessels of all descriptions. To-day it includes more than 25,000 men and 250 vessels—destroyers, armed merchant cruisers, corvettes, minesweepers, patrol and anti-submarine craft. It went into action the moment war was declared and performed valiant service.

Since September, 1939, the Canadian Army of 4,500 men has become one of 230,000 volunteers enlisted for service anywhere; scores of thousands of these men are on duty in England, in Newfoundland, in the West Indies and Gibraltar. In addition the non-permanent active militia, corresponding to the National Guard of the United States, has grown from 45,000 men to a Reserve Army of 170,000 on call for duty in Canada as need arises.

The Royal Canadian Air Force began with 4,000 men. Now it has 80,000, (the equivalent of an air personnel of 900,000 in the United States) with the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan operating 120 separate establishments in Canada. Already thousands of Canadians and others trained in these schools have done heroic work, many at the sacrifice of their lives. Men are now being graduated at twice the rate originally planned for this time as pilots, observers, gunners or radio-operators for duty in fighters and bombers over embattled Britain or Hitler-controlled Europe. Canada provides 80 per cent. of the students at these schools, with others from Australia, New Zealand, Great Britain and other parts of the Empire. Canada has welcomed many from the United States who came to enlist for training or to serve as instructors. The total cost is placed at $824 million for the first three years; of this Canada will contribute $531 million.

Financial Aid To Britain

"But," says our critics, "Canada's aid to Britain is paid for on the 'barrethead'." In reality, Canadians have provided Britain with about three-quarters of the Canadian dollars she has so far needed to purchase war supplies in Canada and they will finance the bulk of Britain's expenditures in Canada in the coming months. In addition to the value of British goods sent to Canada, Great Britain has already needed a billion Canadian dollars to cover her purchases in this country. About a quarter of this sum Great Britain paid Canada in gold. But Canada has shipped not only all of this gold but much more to the United States in order to fill these British orders; and there have been no gold shipments from Great Britain to Canada since December, 1940. The remaining $750 million Canada herself has supplied, Canada provides Great Britain with some of the Canadian money she needs by repatriating Canadian securities held in Great Britain. . . . All this credit, like the money raised to be spent on Canada's own war effort, must be provided by the Canadian people. During the present fiscal year, (April 1, 1941 to March 31, 1942) the total required for such financial aid to Great Britain is estimated at an additional $900 million.

No Apologies Needed

On September 15th it was officially announced that actual deliveries by the United States up to August 31st under the "Lend-Lease" Act had a value of $325 million; expenditures for articles or services not yet completed had an additional value of $162 million, making $487 million in all. It is perfectly clear from official statements that Canadian sales to Great Britain on open account, without we believe, any more definite understanding regarding repayment than under "Lend-Lease" operations, have certainly greatly exceeded total deliveries to date from the United States. When it is considered that Canada's industrialization was at the beginning of the war much lower in relation to population than that of the United States, this is hardly a record to require apologies on our part.

In Canada's case, "Aid to Britain" as the centre of our war effort is a misnomer. Canada is in the war to aid Great Britain certainly but primarily as an active belligerent on her own account, and to loans by Canada to Great Britain must be added the tremendous expense of maintaining air and military forces overseas as well as naval services.

It is undoubtedly true that in our war effort we have left undone many things that we ought to have done. It is true that the average effort could be more intense than it is. To a limited degree Canada has been suffering the disgraceful spectacle of strikes in war industries. But when the worst has been said, any suggestion that Canada as a whole has not thrown herself heart and soul into the existing struggle, without consideration of cost or sacrifice, is something short of the truth.

We have yet to hear of anyone in authority in Canada making any suggestion that the United States has not a perfect right to determine her course of action in relation to the war. We do, however, resent any attempt by citizens of the United States to justify their position by misrepresenting the Canadian war effort.

Needed It All

Farm Woman Had Good Reason For Not Sparing Bread

A Toronto man and his family making an automobile tour of the north shore of the St. Lawrence, found that the bread supply for their meal was short. A call was made at a French-Canadian farm-kitchen to secure a loaf. But the woman who responded to the knock at the door could not oblige. She was so sorry, but her own family would be short of bread too, at the next meal—there were only five loaves left in the box.

Life Saving Feat

Daring Aviator Lands Plane In Heavy Sea To Rescue Survivors
To save seamen from a torpedoed British merchantman, Lieut. V. E. G. Chessman of the fleet air arm landed a plane on a heavy sea, towed a lifeboat around to pick up the survivors and then accepted a tow back to port himself from a trawler.

The story of his life-saving feat was told by the admiral.

Plotting a Walrus plane, Chessman sighted survivors of the Emmaus, clinging to wreckage or in lifeboats. The ship had been torpedoed after a gun-duel with a submarine.

Two miles away he saw two lifeboats with two men in it, the other empty. He had insufficient gasoline to fly back to base to summon help. So he alighted near the lifeboat with the two men.

They swam to the plane and were hauled aboard, exhausted. Chessman then taxied his plane to the other lifeboat.

"I stopped my engine and swam to the boat with a line which I attached to it," Chessman said, describing the rescue. "I swam back to the aircraft, started the engine and towed the boat back to the survivors."

The boat was then manned and picked up many other seamen from the wreckage.

After five hours two trawlers were sighted. In response to signals from the plane they came to the scene. They picked up the survivors and took the plane in tow.

In spite of the stormy conditions, 20 hours after taking off the Walrus was safely brought into port.

MARRIED

A courtship in English, Norwegian and French has ended in the engagement of a daughter of one of Canada's oldest French-Canadian families to a lieutenant of the Royal Norwegian Air Force. The bride is Louise Chevrier, daughter of Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevrier of the supreme court of Ontario, and Mrs. Chevrier, and her husband is Lieutenant Per Thordemand, a flying instructor at Medicine Hat, Alta., where Norwegian and Canadian airmen are training. The marriage took place in the chapel of the air school at Medicine Hat.

Saying It Again

Soldiers Everywhere Have Good Word For Salvation Army Work

Overseas soldiers during the Great War always had a good word to say for the Salvation Army—and, both overseas and at home, they are saying it again in this war. In Canada alone the Salvation Army, in addition to many other services, has already entertained 572,083 service men at concerts, another 1,960,622 at motion picture shows and 1,433,413 at various forms of indoor recreation. It has served more than 10,000,000 in its canteens and distributed more than 12,000,000 sheets of writing paper. It has handled 41,110 articles of clothing for the men, given away 292,000 articles of clothing and served with cost more than 400,000 meals. No wonder the soldiers and sailors and the airmen like the Salvation Army.

• Jack Miner In Movies

Gabriel Pascal Will Produce Life Of Jack Miner For World Showing

Kingsville citizens are excited over the prospect of rubbing elbows for a while with movie stars and producers. Gabriel Pascal, the dark-haired Hungarian producer of "Pygmalion," will soon visit Kingsville with his staff to start producing the life story of Jack Miner. Children are already getting their autograph books and pencils ready, awaiting the arrival of several famous movie artists who are expected to take part in the production. The whole setting of the picture is to be around Jack Miner's home and bird sanctuary. Plans are that it will take nearly two years to produce the picture. Many of Jack Miner's famous addresses will be put into the sound track so that they may be heard by posterity. The picture will include selections from his world-wide radio broadcast, his Rotary Club addresses, and his famous bird lectures.

The picture will be the first complete Canadian movie ever produced in its entirety in Canada, it is stated. Not only will it be released in the United States and Canada, but it will be shown all over the world, which takes from 10 to 12 years, according to moving picture authorities.

The picture will bring additional fame to Jack Miner and to his famous bird sanctuary in Essex County. Mr. Miner has already been rated the best-known Canadian citizen and he ranks fifth in the United States, according to recent survey. The picture will take in the bird life around the Miner home, but it will also feature Mr. Miner's home life; his love for flowers, children, birds, animals, fishing, baseball, blue rock shooting, and chiefly, his love for his fellowmen.

APPLES AND BRAN MAKE GOOD PAIR FOR FALL DISHES

Apples, red and glowing from the autumn sun, sweet and juicy inside—this is the season when they hang ripe in the orchards and markets are filled with baskets of this king of fruit. It is the season to eat the fruit, and a bowl of apples fills the kitchen, when apples are tucked into school lunches and apple pie, apple fritters, and apple dumplings grace the table.

Since the good old fashioned apple dishes—there's nothing better. But try experimenting a bit.

Try apples with bran. It's amazing how the pungent taste of apple combines with the blandness of bran to make this popular breakfast cereal. Together they make a fine team—and a tasty one. Recommended are Applescot Pie, a dessert for the angels. It is made as follows:

Applescot Pie

1½ cups brown sugar
1 cup water
2 tablespoons vinegar
7 cups sliced apples
½ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter

1 cup orange juice extract
1 recipe All-Bran pastry (*)

Combine ¾ cup sugar, water, vinegar; bring to a boil. Add apples and simmer until tender. Remove apples and cool. Combine with remaining sugar, flour and salt. Add to pastry. Mix well; cook until thickening. Cool. Add butter and flavoring. Cool. Place apples in pie plate. Pour syrup over top. Form a lattice with pastry strips over surface of pie. Bake moderately hot oven (425 degrees F.) about 35 minutes.

Yield: One 9-inch pie.

(* All-Bran Pastry

1 cup All-Bran
½ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening

4 tablespoons cold water (more or less)

Roll All-Bran until fine; combine with flour and salt. Cut in shortening. Add water, a little at a time, until dough is moist enough to hold together.

Inspiration For Poet

Writer In Victorian Age Had Liking For One Letter

Apart from being what Sam Walter spelt it with, on those rare occasions when he had to write his name, the letter "V" has other literary associations, says a writer in the "Manchester Guardian Weekly." Ernest Dowson, the Victorian poet, once told Arthur Symons that his ideal for a line of verse was Poe's "The violet, the violet, and the vine," and he explained his preference by saying that "the letter 'V' was the most beautiful of the letters, and could never be brought into verse too often." This theory no doubt inspired Dowson to write:

"Violets and leaves of vine,
For love that lives a day."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The telephone bell roused her the next morning just as she tried to find her way back to consciousness from dream-tormented sleep.

"Devona, darling?" Tal's voice, vibrant with excitement.

"Yes," sleepily. "Tal?"

"Angel, I have magnificient news. I'm coming right down to tell you. Have breakfast with me?"

"Of course. How soon?"

"Twenty minutes should be long enough for you to get yourself beautiful. Love me this morning?"

She smiled into the receiver. "Yes, Tal—love you very much."

And the little smile lingered as she showered, dressed. How could she help loving him? High-string, effervescent, he was like bubbling champagne himself. And some day, she promised her half-closed-eyed reflection, she'd get over this silly yearning she had for his brother. Some day she'd realize how lucky, how terribly lucky, she was that Tal, fine and splendid and idealistic, had offered her a real love.

Later, after their toast and coffee, Tal beamed at her boyishly. "Darling, you've brought me amazingly good luck already." He reached for her hand across the table.

"Have I, really? Tell me."

"John Brannon, a New York agent, saw my play last night and said it was pretty awful but he liked the dialogue—some of it. Said it showed promise of the kind of thing he wants. So he's offered me a job in New York—with him and I'm to collaborate on a musical comedy another chap is writing. How's that?"

"Oh, Tal! How wonderful!" Devona felt her own enthusiasm skyrocket. "I knew it would have to happen eventually. Oh, so soon! Aren't you thrilled? Oh, Tal, darling. I am proud of you."

"Are you?" tenderness flooded into his eyes, "my little guardian angel?"

For a minute, she couldn't speak for gratitude to luck or fate or that strange destiny of her that had granted her this supremely happy moment. At least this was one thing she'd done well. She'd saved Tal for this immediate reward. And this-like a good omen-assured her she could go on playing this role of guardian angel. It would be enough. If not ecstasy, it would bring satisfying peace and happiness in Tal's joys. What more could she ask of life?

"We'll leave the middle of next week, honey," he planned rapidly. "I'll have to hang around here a few days to wind up some business. Then we'll fly to Reno and get ourselves married. No fuss and feathers. Okay?"

"Okay."

"Swell. Now suppose we trot right down to your pal Macias' place and hand in your resignation. There's nothing I'm going to enjoy more than telling that guy——"

But did she? Tal would forbid it, if he knew. Dale, too, probably—much as it might mean for him at the coming primaries. She could easily report her suspicions to one of Dale's undersecretaries, she thought wryly. And let it go at that. After all, it was none of her business——

"What do you mean not yet?" Tal demanded, frowning.

"I—I have a special reason, Tal," she tried to explain. "I can't tell you now—but I must stay on until after Tuesday."

"But——"

"Please, darling. I promise that after Tuesday I'll never go near that place again. And—don't worry about Macias. He eats out of my hand."

Tal's brown relaxed into a grin. "No doubt. Just why Tuesday?"

"One word."

So did she, she added silently. She was, naturally, probably, to risk this just for her pride's sake. And for Dale. But no one else could see this through. No one else had the opportunity to really nail this thing. She was sure of that.

Not that Tal would feel she was living up to that promise, she told herself Tuesday afternoon as she stepped out of her street clothes into the costume she would wear to-night for the last time. She could hardly call his plan taking care of anybody—unless it were Dale. Who hadn't asked her, wouldn't thank her even to butt into his affairs. Fool that she was.

Dressed finally—in the soft, red satin to-night, Macias liked it best of her costumes. She dusted the powder puff over her flushed cheeks, drew a long breath. So far she'd been lucky. She hadn't seen Macias since the night of the interrupted phone call. He'd been ill; his houseboy had phoned. Confined to his bed with a serious chest cold. But to-night he was coming back to the club!

If he really had been ill, she thought as she made her way to his office, then she was truly safe enough. But if illness had been only a blind to——

She tapped softly at the door, pushed it open.

He'd been ill, all right. Darkened circles under his eyes, cheeks hollow, black eyes heavy. He looked up at her across his littered desk.

"Hello, Dona," and then, before he could go on, a spasm of wrenching coughs. "Wait. Want to talk?" he gasped.

Devona waited, a tight rein on her fears, a calm smile to hide behind. If he'd discovered her lie—he'd heard about the change in plans—the shift to No. 47 Front St.

"How's it been going?" he asked as soon as he had the breath.

"Fine."

"This damned cold's got me down." He coughed again, wiped his eyes. "Everything's in a mess. Sorry I can't take you home to-night. I wanted to talk to you. But——" He waved at the mess of papers.

"Looks as if I'll be here all night."

"Easier on YOUR THROAT!"

Devona released anxiety with a long sigh. Not a trace of suspicion. So far, everything was too easy to be true!

"Please don't mention it. Some other time—when you're not so busy," she said, and hoped her exulting didn't show. "I'm so glad you're some better."

Some other time! And there'd never be another time, she told herself happily as she wandered with the Troubadours from table to table that evening. Her last night on display. Her last night as Dona Carotta!

Almost—she added, wryly. "There was still to-night's little adventure. It wasn't quite time for congratulations. Not until 'some time after midnight.'"

She sang her best, that evening, gave generously of her encores and her smiles. Even Manuel noticed it.

"Why so cheerful, Sweetheart?"

"Not like to-night." He studied her frankly. "Anything up?"

She shook her head. "No, why?"

"O.K. pal. Keep your little secret. But——" and he jerked his head toward the glass-paneled door, something's up with the big chief, too, I'm guessing. Something he doesn't like. So—keep out of his way. I'm warning you."

"I'll be careful," she promised, smiling; but a little worry tagged in to her mind. Something upsetting Macias to-night? Surely he couldn't have guessed—be suspicious. She'd just talked to him. He'd seemed——

She brushed the thought aside. She'd have seen something was wrong. One look at the dark eyes had always been warning enough before.

When it was nearly midnight she slipped to her dressing room, shed her costume. She didn't usually leave quite this early. Still, Macias, busily in his office, wouldn't miss her, and the Troubadours sometimes skippe the 1 o'clock show, if there weren't many customers. Fortunately, to-night had been slow.

Escape from her dressing room, out the back way through the kitchen to the alley, was easy enough. And from there to the street behind and a drug store where she phoned for a taxi.

No^o 47 Front St., in San Pedro," she told the driver, and discouraged his quick surprise with a frosty little nod.

The long ride down busy Wilshire Blvd. rested her a little. A fascinating street, she loved it.

Then, as they left the gay lights of the great, broad street, drew nearer and nearer the San Pedro waterfront, friendliness fell behind, and a sort of sinister reticence hovered in the shadowy, winding streets, where thin, decrepit houses, poorly lit, lurked in rows just at the edge of the fringe of street lights.

"Here you are, miss. No. 47." The driver stopped the car, leaped out to swing open the door.

For the space of a sigh, she hesitated. No. 47, a narrow, two-story frame house was, like every other house on the block, an exact replica of the one next door. Unlike the others, a light burned behind a closely drawn blind in an upper room. Through the taxi's open door she felt the cold snap of the sea wind on her cheek. Smelled the dank oily odor of sudden pilings of an outgoing tide.

"Here you are, Miss." The driver's voice jogged her impatiently.

"Yes, Thanks." She climbed out, pulled her jacket collar closer. "Will you wait, please?"

"Wait? Sure, Miss," and closing the door climbed back under the wheel.

The narrow porch steps creaked under her light step and a loose board whined. She waited a moment, fingers trembling against the old-fashioned knocker, while her breath caught up with her. Silly to be frightened at a few shadows and a cracking step, she scoffed. But—and tried to muster a little laugh—the place was so perfectly the scene for a ghost story. It would be disappointing if something exciting didn't turn up after all this.

She pulled stanchly at the knocker.

Inside she heard its hollow echoing through what must be a long hall. Echoed and then—footsteps. Quick short steps as of a person half running. Like the rickshaw coolies of Shanghai. She thought irrelevantly.

If men aren't eager to dance with you, maybe that's one of your bad dance habits too—taking the lead from your partner as you dance backward.

To be the pliant, light-footed dancer, like, practice at home with simple instructions and diagrams. Soon you can say YES to these questions!

In dancing backward, do you move your body away from your partner until you can easily lift your heels? Do you relax your knees?

To dance backward without getting stepped on, your nose pointing slightly forward, your feet pointing back, leading with your toe?

Or is your main dancing trouble just not knowing the steps?

Get 32-page booklet with clear footprints and diagrams and instructions showing the most popular dance steps and variations—rumba, Conga, tango, fox-trot, slow fox-trot, waltz, shag. Tells how to lead and follow, timing, rhythm, different dance positions.

Send 15¢ in coins for your copy of "Home Course in New Ballroom Dances" to Home Service Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermot Ave., Winnipeg Man.

The following booklets are also available at 15¢ each:

197—"Drawing Design Self-Taught."

194—"Games and Stunts for Two or More."

193—"Drawing Made Easy."

191—"How to Make Your Own Rugs."

190—"Quick Course in Piano Playing."

189—"Simple Cartoons Self-Taught."

Rubber Fenders

Fenders of molded rubber are being used increasingly on trucks and buses in England. They have the advantage of straightening out their own dents after a collision—and collisions are frequent in the night. The use of rubber also frees that much more steel for war purposes.—Popular Mechanics.

The pennies of ancient Rome were made of silver and would be worth 15 cents each at present values.

KIN IS SOVIET LEADER

Marshal Arthur Timoshenko, Soviet army commander defending Moscow, is a brother of "Archie" Timoshenko, a prospector of Winston (formerly Swastika), in northern Ontario. The brothers were born on the same day, March 23, three years apart. For this reason the priest named them both Arthur.

Chinese Puzzle

Taking The Census Of Chinese In British Columbia

It's a Chinese puzzle and it's never been solved—because census officers are hopeful that soon they'll have the first 100 per cent record of all Chinese in British Columbia.

Many of them do not know their ages but they know in what year of what dynasty they were born. For instance, a man born in the fourth year of the Hung Ge dynasty is now 74.

"I'll be careful," she promised, smiling; but a little worry tagged in to her mind. Something upsetting Macias to-night? Surely he couldn't have guessed—be suspicious. She'd just talked to him. He'd seemed——

She brushed the thought aside. She'd have seen something was wrong. One look at the dark eyes had always been warning enough before.

When it was nearly midnight she slipped to her dressing room, shed her costume. She didn't usually leave quite this early. Still, Macias, busily in his office, wouldn't miss her, and the Troubadours sometimes skippe

the 1 o'clock show, if there weren't many customers. Fortunately, to-night had been slow.

Escape from her dressing room, out the back way through the kitchen to the alley, was easy enough. And from there to the street behind and a drug store where she phoned for a taxi.

No^o 47 Front St., in San Pedro," she told the driver, and discouraged his quick surprise with a frosty little nod.

London's Royal Mint

London's Royal Mint expects to turn out more medals in the year following the present war than at any period in its history; and in an average year it strikes 34,000 of them and of decorations of all kinds.

The Mint has been doing that continuously since 1643 when Charles I instituted the Forlorn Hope Badge.

Wallace Sword

The Wallace sword, one of Scotland's national relics, removed by four masked men in 1936 and discovered at Bothwell Brig, will be restored to its place in Stirling, Scotland.

BUTTER PRICE DROPS AGAIN

The wholesale price of No. 1 creamery Butter declined one cent in Calgary today to 32½ cents a pound. This follows three one-cent drops during September, and brings the wholesale price four cents under the summer peak reached in August. The decline also brings the price within the reach of the pegged minimum fixed last spring which was 31 cents for Oct.
